Comments:

I am a retired MSU professor in botany/ecology. I believe that our wild relatives -- plants, animals, mushrooms, birds, insects -- deserve habitat sanctuaries that are untrammled, unfragmented, unmechanized by humans. Relatively wild areas are diminishing rapidly and these organisms have nowhere to go to remain undisturbed. After traveling in other places in the world, we should be/remain really proud to provide sustainable habitats in which humans are basically secondary, and we appreciate the wildness we have. I support option D that provides the best option for protecting the wildlife (including plants) that the Custer-Gallatin Forest can provide.
