Comments:

As a citizen of Bozeman, I often recreate in Hyalite Canyon. This is one of many places I hold dear to my heart, and provides a place for me to wander the forest and appreciate the wild beauty of our landscape.

Alternative C protects the wilderness study area of Hyalite-Porcupine-Buffalo Horn and recommends the Forest Service to designate 102,000 acres of the Gallatin range as wilderness. This designation would provide a continuous flow of wilderness from Yellowstone to the Gallatin Range, securing crucial migration routes to and from these areas for wildlife.

I fully support the Gallatin Forest Partnership agreement to designate 250,000 acres in the Gallatin and Madison range.

Thank you for your time and considerations,

Richard Jones
